to billy

Yesterday we left Stovepipe Wells driving northeast on SR 190 past the Mesquite Dunes to North Highway, turned left there, then made a right on Daylight Pass Road and started the climb through Mud Canyon to Hell's Gate and Corkscrew Peak. The purple flowers of the Death Valley Phacelia lined both sides of the road. We wanted to take photographs, but the shoulders were all loose sand and gravel, there weren't any places that looked safe for us to pull off. You know the old saying: one paragraph is worth a thousand pictures.
